

I am forced to sit here, with tears in my eyes, looking at you.

My broken heart refusing to say good-bye to you.

The pain continues to grow each and every day.

This nightmare all began, when I had to listen to what the policeman had to say.

"The teen admitted to being distracted while driving. The car crossed the center line, hit your head-on," causing my phone to start ringing.

Hearing these words being said to me, caused me to drop to my knees and start to scream.

"The young, inexperienced teen took their eyes off the road, for what they thought was only a second or two"

That dreadful mistake on that day, caused the Heavens to take my beloved baby away.

"I'm so very sorry," was all that the teen could confess. But, that softly spoken apology will never be able to fill my hearts emptiness.

The teen will have to live with being the cause of your death, all of their life. They aren't the only one, as I too, will live with this loss the rest of my life.

The message I wish to convey to you, is simple and easy to do.

If you want to arrive alive, then stay focused while you drive.

Distractions of only a second or two, happens quickly and can kill innocent people, as well as you.

You may think that nothing is going to happen if you only take your eyes off the road for just a second or two. You never know when at the blink of an eye, someone's life can end, all because of the actions by you.

Memories and pictures are all that I have left of you. Don't get distracted while driving, or someone could be left saying the same of you.

Don't let yourself be the cause of someone's pain. Don't be the reason that someone can't dance in the rain.

Stay focused not only on the goals in your life, but, also when you drive. Help others and also yourself, arrive alive.
