

Think Twice

A boy enters a car, with a bottle of beer
when out of the sky, a voice he can hear.
Maybe a guardian angel, or just in his head,
but he can hear clearly what is said.
“Think twice.”

He pauses for a moment to clear his mind
to think about this message that was left behind.
What’s the worst that could happen if he just takes a drink.
Well. . . Let’s think.

While he thinks, his body leaves the ground
he rises to the sky, then he hears a crashing sound.
He soars to his house and looks inside
he finds two parents who are teary eyed.

He finds his Mom and Dad who finished talking with the police who was sad to inform them that their son was at peace.
“It was a drunk driving accident that killed your son”
The boy tries to leave, but his journey has just begun.

He soars once again through his town
as he passes his girlfriends house, he sees a frown.
She too has been told about the horrible news
how the boy took his privilege of life to abuse.

As he soars higher and higher to the stars
he enters a graveyard full of crashed cars.
In front of each car rested a memorial stone with the names of the people who were once known.

As the boy looked around in shock and despair
he saw something that he could hardly bare.
He saw a stone which bore his name
then again, the voice he heard before came.

“Do not fret, this is something you may undo,
but remember, if you make this choice, look what may become of you.
You still have a choice, so choose well,
if you choose right path, this prophecy you may expel.”

The boy woke up in his car with a new insight and knew what choice would be right.
He dumped the bottle of beer outside his door
and from that moment on, he'd drink and drive no more

Years later, he still remembers the mysterious voice who told him that he still had a choice.
For every option has a price
So before you choose...
Think Twice.