

A boy named Jon, and a girl named Chelsea attended a prom on May 8th of 2008. When they got to prom they met up with friends and talked about what was happening after prom. They decided to attend a party after the prom and have some fun.

When Jon and Chelsea got to the party they decided to drink with their buddies and have a good prom night. However what they didn't know is that their "good prom night" would come with a horrible outcome.

Jon and Chelsea had their fun at prom and had their fun at the party, so by 2 am they decided to leave and head home, both were heavily intoxicated. They both were having a hard time leaving their friends house because Jon's friend kept saying "Don't leave you can't drive. You're to drunk to drive. You've been drinking all night with Chelsea" Jon replied with "It's okay we'll be fine." Jon and his friend insisted on arguing about this matter and Jon won the argument.

Jon and Chelsea got into Jons car and swerved off. They were almost home when all of a sudden they hit something and slammed into a telephone pole. It went all dark, Then Jon woke up and looked at Chelsea to see if she was alright, there was blood all over the place. Chelsea was unconscious. Jon heard sirens and blackout after hearing it.

Jon later woke up in a hospital bed while the nurse was beside him writing on a clipboard with a piece of paper on it. He asked "My girlfriend Chelsea, Is she alright?" The nurse just looked at him with a sad face and said "I'm sorry, she didn't make it". Jon started crying, and cried for a fairly long time. Then a cop came in to question him on what happened. The cop asked "Do you remember anything that happened?" Jon replied with "I hit something and then it all went dark". The cop finally said that what he hit was a Teenager who was out pass curfew and he hit a telephone pole.

Jon asked if the Teen was alright. The cop replied with "No he is dead." Jon then started crying even harder, and waiting for his parents.

Drunk driving is seriously wrong, After reading this, take a thought before you drink and drive. You could be saving a person or peoples lives. Everything is at stake. Your job even maybe your life when drinking and driving. So please. Think your actions out before doing something you're going to regret.
