

Because you decided

You took her life
It was Christmas break and on her way home
This year emptier than ever in her home
Because you chose to text and drive

He was only 7
On his way visit his grandmother, but no more
Now greeted by a call from the police
Because your call was more important than their lives

We were going to graduate together
Crossing the street walking to school
But now I am down a friend
Because you wanted to check the score

He was going to walk his daughter down the aisle
An entire life that he could have watched unfold
Her dress replaced by a black suit for him
Because you didn't feel like leaving your car overnight

She loved her owner
The walks, the car rides
But now, she waits for someone who will never return
Because you were too busy to pay attention to the road

None of this should happen
It could have easily been prevented
But it did
Because you decided to drive distracted