

At one point in our lives we thought we were invincible,
that we had the ability to text and drive.
That we would survive.
And that's what you say until you realize the risk you place on other's lives Defines the value your put on your own.