

By Rose O'Brion

Not Worth It

Life can flash before your eyes,
When one mistake can be done.
But the consequences are crucial,
If we decide to be dumb.

Is a selfish desire made up of liquid permanent?
Or is a living heart temporary to a human's fulfillment.

It's not worth taking the chance,
even if you feel in control.
Because if you're intoxicated,
that is not a weapon you can re-roll.

There's no one way or the other,
It's life over each-other.
So before you get into that car,
Make sure you have someone to call,
Because one drink isn't worth losing
A perfectly good heart,
It's not worth losing anything at all.

But that's tragic and cold truth.
Don't take the risk, the fetal risk of alcohol.
Almost 29 people die while drunk driving everyday,
That could be you, so arrive alive today.