

This sad story starts at a party, a group of girls goes over to a good friend's house they are hanging out and having a good time when all of the sudden some people show up and then some more and finally before you know it there at a full-blown party going on and everyone is drinking having a good time. Around 2 AM the group of girls is talking to a couple of their friends one of the friends is talking about another party he knows about $ hey I heard Mark is having a party it's supposed to be super awesome does anyone want to come with me Jack says slurring his words. Everyone's looking at Jack then Michele says Jack we would want to go but I don't know how we would get there you and Ella have been drinking and are the only ones that can drive. Jack thinks he has a great idea and says well silly me and Ella can still drive people. Everyone's still staring at Jack but now some people seem to be agreeing with him. Michele knowing better says Jack that is not a good idea we have all been drinking and you are talking like you drank a whole case of beer all by yourself, I think it's best if we just stay here. Ella agreeing says I'm sure as hell not driving anywhere in this state. Jack feeling annoyed with his friends says fine I will drive anyone that wants to go to Mark's in my car with me. now people are frantically talking over each other saying stuff like I want to go and can I get a seat. Jack thought for a minute says is there anyone else here that can drive besides me and Ella? Amy says ooh I can but I can drive that many people I only have room for 4 people. Jack knowing that more people would want to come says I can make a couple of trips. Michele still looking at them with disappointment is calling someone to come pick her up. As Jack and Amy are getting ready to leave and bring their first groups of people Michele's ride is just getting there. When Michele gets into her friend's car she sees Jack speed away having a feeling of sadness rush through her body as if she could tell that was the drive he was going to make. She and her friend are pulling out of the driveway talking and listening to music but Michele just can't shake this feeling she is about to see something that will change people's lives forever. Meanwhile, Jack and Amy both pull into Mark's driveway Amy is saying she doesn't want to make another trip to get anyone else so Jack says fine I will just get everyone myself. Now Amy is getting a feeling of this being the end for Jack. As Jack pulls away not paying any attention he is almost hit from behind by a car he starts to laugh thinking about how lucky he is. Back in the car with Michele and some friends they are all laughing and having a good time singing the songs playing on the radio out of the corner of her eye she sees two cars smashed into each other she yells STOP at the top of her lungs as the car pulls over she jumps out and runs over to the scene knowing that the blue Honda is Jack's still running she finally reaches his car she opens the door and pulls him out trying to bring him back she starts going CPR but he is gone there is no hope as she starts to cry for her friend's life she calls 911. This was the first and last time she would ever let her friends drink and drive and from that day on she know she would always get the message out there that drinking and driving cause lives lost now she always says you should everyone should know better than to drink and drive if that want to arrive alive.